

STAYING VIGILANT AGAINST CYBER ATTACKS

2022

MARCH

In today's digital age, cyber attacks such as online scams are more common. Attackers may try to "phish" for sensitive information through fraudulent websites and spoof messages. These attacks may also disrupt critical infrastructures, such as in the case of cyber terrorism. As such, organisations and their employees need to be well prepared and protect themselves against these attacks.

Here are some precautions companies can take.

ERR ON THE SIDE OF CAUTION

Remind employees to exercise extreme caution before responding to messages, especially if the sender asks for sensitive information or money. When in doubt, check with the relevant authorities before responding.

DOUBLE CHECK WEBSITE URLS

Spoof websites attempt to impersonate legitimate content. Remind employees to double check and verify website URLs, and equip them with the knowledge and tools to identify and report such sites. Do not click on unfamiliar links, as these may contain harmful malware that could compromise your IT systems.

UPDATE IT ASSETS AND INFORM EMPLOYEES REGULARLY

Safeguard your company's IT assets by regularly updating your data security software with the latest patches. Perform frequent backups for important data offline, to prevent the loss of information. Ensure that your employees are aware of the latest cyber threats and update their software diligently.
