

If you are injured, you should attend all medical appointments at the same hospital

I have a medical appointment at 2pm today, but I do not want to go. I want to change to another hospital.

You should not do that. When I changed hospital last time, I had to pay the medical bill first. I even had to get the new doctor to certify that my injury was due to work before I can claim from my employer.

When I failed to attend my medical appointment at the hospital arranged by my employer, my claim was put on hold. I was unable to claim my medical leave wages during this period. It was a bad lesson for me.

I did not know it was so troublesome just to change hospital.

I understand now. I will attend my appointment today and stick with the same hospital.

Do not change hospital. You will still receive the same professional treatment whichever hospital you go.
